The Story of Susquehanna

UNDERNEATH the majestic pines on Susquehanna's campus stands a Gothic Cross, a monument of gratitude, to the great man in whose heart was first conceived and by whose efforts was realized the noble institution which we all love. Once a year we meet to celebrate the laying of the first corner stone and to express our appreciation to those God directed men who made it possible. It is then that allowing our minds to wander back into the realms of imagination, we can picture Susquehanna University in its most humble beginnings of more than half a century ago and briefly trace its history to the present day.

Just what vicissitude of fate brought about the choosing of the site for Missionary Institute, as Susquehanna was first called, we cannot determine; but we are certain that the fates could not have been more kind. For in a valley of Mesopotamian fertility, surrounded by verdure clad hills, and through which the mighty stream from which the institution later derived its name, wends its way; was raised up this Temple of Christian Education. For on an eminence overlooking the town of Selinsgrove and the flowing river beyond, the first spadeful of earth was turned and the first stone put in place, amid the prayers of men for the evergrowing prosperity of the school thus founded.

From that day and from those beginnings, Susquehanna has grown in honor and power even as the great trees which adorn her campus have grown from small and insignificant twigs. From one building in which both the professors and students lived as well as serving for class room and dining hall, she has steadily gone forward until now there stand on the campus, five structures of splendid design, supplying the needs of the ever increasing number of students.

Then when we speak of the triumphs, we must consider the circumstances through which they all have been brought about. In our first consideration, we think with awe and reverence of the great and noble service of those learned Doctors, some of whom from the days of Missionary Institute and others who from the later time of Susquehanna's beginnings as a University have given their full measure of devotion, some of whom continue to this day in the sending forth into the world of trained men in the name of Susquehanna. Around them our story radiates and upon them reflects the glory of the Institution which they have so long and faithfully served. There are also those who have served on the Board of Directors or in some other capacity, giving both their moral and financial support to the young and struggling University. Of alumni, Susquehanna is represented in nearly every part of the world and they by their honor gained have set up the standard of their Alma Mater, commanding the recognition and respect of all. This and more may be said along the line of these thoughts, but let us dwell for a time upon the spirit of Susquehanna.

Looking toward the South from the campus, the horizon is broken here and there by the rugged peaks of the hills and the promontories of the mountains extending like sentinels, guarding the valley between. Most prominent of all these is Mount Mahanoy and it is to it that we liken the spirit of Susquehanna. For even as the climber by constant effort reaches the summit of Mahanoy whence he can look down upon a scene of most gorgeous splendor, so may one by striving diligently among the classic halls of S. U. gain the height of attainment from which he may look out upon a world of opportunities and visions of a glorious future. At the base of the mount the summit seems far, far above and almost inaccessible but the mountain itself by arrangement of nature has laid open the way; so upon one's entering the halls of learning at Susquehanna, the way for the longed for diploma is made possible by the spirit of the school expressed in the "Recognition of Work Well Done." In her going forward, Susquehanna has undergone many trials and hardships, but even as old Mahanoy buffeted by winds and rains still stands forth in rugged majesty, so our Alma Mater continues to stand forth and to cast the influence of her spirit upon all who come in contact with her.

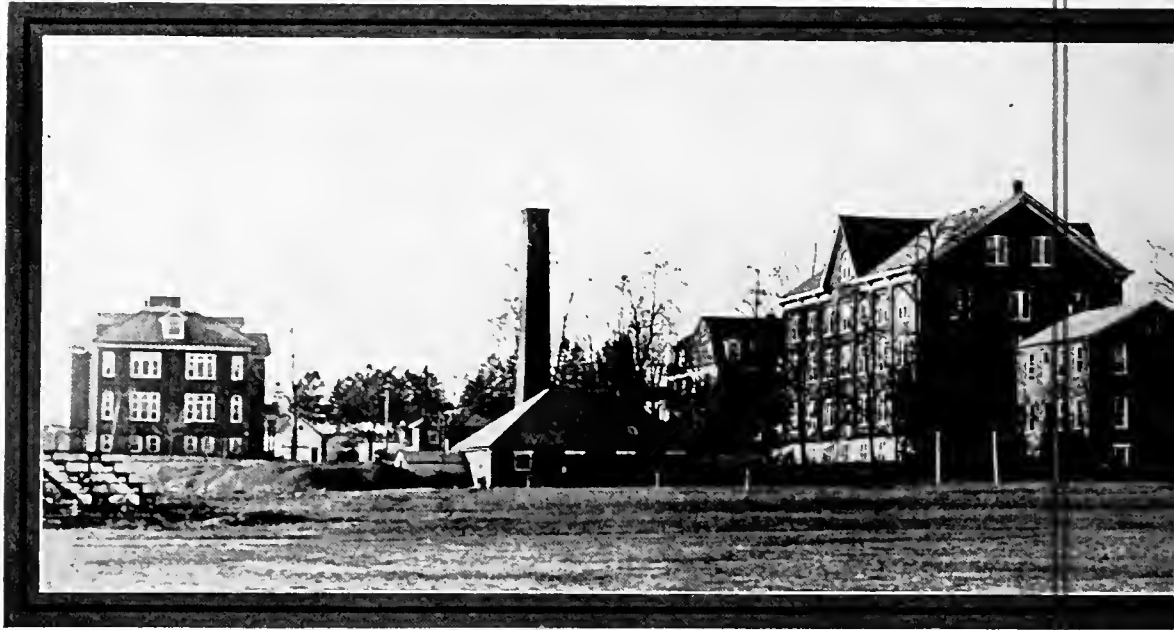

And now, what of it all? Like the great river which gave Susquehanna its name first found its beginning in a little spring, so the love of the Master's service welling up in a Christian Man's heart wrought the first conception of our revered University. Like the great river has ever gone forward constantly receiving greater strength in its course by inflowing streams, so S. U. has ever gone forward receiving strength in her course by the service and devotion of Godly men. Like the river though having to cut its own channel and to force its way through handicaps of nature has become a mighty power, so Susquehanna though struggling along a path of hardship has reached the high pinnacle of honor and success.

Aye truly, Susquehanna University has had a glorious though toilsome past, and if that can in any way foretell the future, we can picture the exalting of her name and honor high in the estimation of the world, just as Mahanoy towers above and with her summit reaches forth among the clouds. We can see that beyond this fulfillment of her existence, there rises a radiant prophecy of greater work and glory, and still beyond, in endless procession, the days of Susquehanna, rich in power and knowledge, and love of service, forever and forever.

Hanorama

The story we would tell you friends,
    Would cover many a book;
The subject matter of the same,
    Is found in every nook;
Of old S. U.'s large campus,
    The common battle ground;
Whose trees might whisper secrets
    Grave, amusing and profound.

Of Susquehanna now we sing,
Let Susquehanna's praises ring;
Loyal to her by night and by noon,
We'll wave the Orange and Maroon;
Loyal to her by night and by noon,
We'll wave the Orange and Maroon.

Senior Class Prophecy

SUDDENLY, like a hero red with blood, the sun leaped from the dark abyss and clattered in the heavens flooding the eastern sky with glory and flinging across the golden dunes the rosy mantle of the morn which warmed the chilly dawn. And with the call of the sun, like the true Mussulman that he was, Khaled rose from his pallet by the water hole, replenished his prayer rug from a heap of luggage, and knelt toward the east in the silent devotion of the faithful. Every feature of the impressively gorgeous picture seemed so unnatural, so impossible that in desperation I finally exclaimed, "O son of the sands speak to me concerning my classmates and show me the mirage which thou promised and for which I have already paid sixty dirhems. Shall it be said, O child of Islam, that a true believer was a liar and a cheat?"

"Thou art of little faith, exalted one," he said. "In the land of Allah there are no liars or cheats, and within one hour I shall reveal to you that for which you are seeking or I shall sit in the houris of hell. Moreover, O Master, pay thy servant a handful of silver and I shall not only reveal a mirage to you but will also allow your vision to pierce the future."

"Thou are a systematic robber," I answered, flinging a coin upon the scorching sand.

"Name what you wish to see," he replied solemnly.

"My classmates, if thou canst."

"Then deign to turn unto the East, O Master, and marvel at the miracles of Allah, the god who is God," and with the sob of the zealot, he prostrated himself upon the ground in prayer.

I glanced across my shoulder and traded incredulity for awe. There floating on the far horizon like a filmy tapestry was the longed desires of my dream. As the withering glare of the Egyptian sun grew momentarily stronger, the details of the city became so distinct that it became possible to recognize the familiar faces in the street and read the signs in the shop windows. Across Broad Street, hung a great banner announcing the candidacy of Att'y George B. Harmon for gubernatorial honors and soliciting the support of the people for James B. Horton for Mayor. An electric sign-board suspended between two skyscrapers heralded the coming of Anita Hilbish and Charles Dinnison, noted opera stars who were to sing in "Carmen," while placards in the windows advertised a series of lectures to be given by Dr. Dallas C. Baer, moralist and thinker, and Professor Zoe Wise who is assisting him not only in his tours, but also in life, is lecturing to the women concerning the present economical household conditions, under the auspices of Ex-Minister Russell Auman's celebrated newspaper, the Morning Herald.

Before Harold Fisher's Pharmacy there stood a newspaper rack containing the morning editions of the city papers. Besides the "Morning Herald," there was Neidig's "Independent," and Rote's "Christian Chronicle," upon whose pages the famous politician had ridden into a dozen political offices. The headlines of the "Independent" stated that plans for the erection of the proposed structure for the manufacture of furniture under the direction of Sterling Decker would be started at once and should be employing about a thousand men by the first of the year. Another headline announced that the trouble in the coal mines of Ernest B. Cassler had subsided and that co-operation has been secured by employer and employee making conditions ideal for the future.

An article by Professor Esther Cressman of Smith College, dealt with the economic conditions of the country, while Charlotte Fisher had written a rather spontaneous account of the Shannon-Rearick nuptials. It was announced that the bride and groom would retire to a country charge where the little sunbeams might play about the home. The "Christian Chronicle" was loud in its praise of the splendid work of Rev. William A. Janson, D.D., pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church, and it also contained a sermon written by the Rev. Charles Drumm. There was notice that in the next issue, Evelyn Allison, the brilliant scholar, would begin a series of papers on the national issues and conduct a department devoted to "Every-day Psychology."

After searching for a while longer among these headlines and failing to find other names familiar to me, I turned to see a massive structure of steel and iron which hid its towering spire among the clouds. And upon inquiring concerning the architect of this colossal and gigantic structure, I found it to be George Cassler.

The ground floor was occupied jointly by the Hackenburg Remedy Company and the executive offices of the Potteiger Sausage Trust, while on the second floor was found a school conducted by Miss Laura Schoch, D.D. (Doctor of Dancing). Higher up I saw lettered on one of the windows—George Swartz, Heart and Liver Specialist. Near the top of the building, I found the offices of Ralph Woodruff, the wealthy wholesale merchant; and the studio of Dorothy Bonawitz, greatest of American artists and illustrators. Jay Riden was the name spelled across the door of one apartment and upon inquiry I discovered that he was absent for the Winter, being the Director of Athletics at the University of Michigan. Victor Erdly was living in the same apartments during Riden's absence a campaign on "the value of the film as an educator." He is interested in the moving picture business and is making of it a huge success.

As my eyes wandered upward, searching out the names of my old classmates I came at last to the pyramidal roof. Here beneath the flag staff, on the top-most floor, the marble front was replaced by the exquisite apartments of an elite society belle. The location was ideal, for the view added to the luxurious surroundings and as I was wondering what person could be so fortunate and auspicious as to possess such a monopoly of good fortune; a window was raised and a beautiful, brown-eyed girl rested her face in her hands, her elbows on the sill and looking absently as though longing for someone down in the ocean in the space below. It was Bernice Swartz.

I rose and moving to the edge of the oasis, watched the mirage glimmer uncertainly and finally dissolve into the air like the flame of life. It was gone like a dream, like the hopes of youth which manhood finds to be but a bubble; and once again as the awakened dreamer faces cruel reality, I turned to think upon the road which stretched before.

"What is life but a dream, a mirage?" And the reward of the awakened is as the dreamer has dreamt. What matters if the compensation be but half of hope? "Half of Heaven is better than all of Hell," and with this nibble of philosophy, he swung upon the ridge of his ungainly mount and leaving me to follow, passed silently out into the desert.

"Gee Whiz"

"Red," "Satan"

Behold him! Satan. This young handsome chap hails from the care free town of Mifflinburg. But alas! how often we depart from our early training. He came here with a determination of making something out of himself. He did. When the war broke out he got right in it and after seeing two years of service in France, has returned to our beloved Susquehanna and has entered the class of nineteen twenty-one. He immediately made a hit with us and was elected to pilot the class through its third year in college. He sets a good example by being present at all of his classes, even if the Profs do catch him half asleep snapping at the flies. When he has studied his lesson one may hear his deep voice reciting it. But too sad—some days he has nothing to say. He is a man of fine character and loves to attend Chapel. He enjoys the sermons on Sunday mornings very much—asleep in his bed. This is probably due to the fact that he inhabits the regions of Sleepy Hollow. Here he can be found any time outside of study hours.

Although very shy of the fair sex, he is occasionally seen at parties where his presence is demanded by some lady friend. Not to be outdone by his classmates and showing a real love for the game, he came out for football. Ere long he was holding a regular place on the Varsity. Although a fellow of very quiet nature and seemingly asleep most of the time, this young man has an alert mind and is sometimes spoken of as brainy. But we will leave that up to the Profs.

When he undertakes to do something, he sets at it with a determination to succeed. For this reason we bespeak for him future success and happiness, and know that he will make good in any line of work which is undertaken by him.

"Katie"

Over two years ago a young lassie with black hair and fiery eyes landed upon our campus. Needless to say, without any personal acquaintance one could readily read upon her quick tempered countenance that she belonged to an Irish family—two sisters having made famous the halls of S. U. just a few years past. Kathryn thus came with high ambitions to uphold and surpass all past family traditions. But ere time had sped on, it was soon discovered that "Katie" was a suitable pseudonym for this maiden—and day after day, and night after night, the melodious strains of would-be suitors were continually heard singing the song that she enjoyed to hear, "K-K-Katie, Beautiful Maiden, your the only g-g-girl that I adore." However, only a few of these wooers won out and at last she seems to have decided upon one and only one. How long this decision will continue, no one knows. For when Katie once decides upon a certain issue—then it is, "my will be done, and not 'Will's.'"

This young lady informs us that she expects to be a school teacher for at least three years and after that—well, the culmination is readily seen, in fact it is the inevitable. To Katie, a man is essential, as her entire college life has proven. She is specializing along the lines of campustry and parchology, and as a result neglects her other studies. Yet Katie is a very intelligent girl, always attends classes and recites when called upon.

Katie is very congenial—everybody admires her big smile and willingness to do things. She includes both sexes in her category of friends but naturally more time is preferred with the opposite sex. Many times her love affairs weigh heavily upon her mind for occasionally one of her old wooers appears upon the scene and then poor Katie's worries begin, but "Bill" always comes out victorious.

"Great Balls"

Kind fortune decreed that at the close of his High School career this very dignified and learned appearing individual should turn his back upon the bright lights of Elysburg, to continue his journey toward the goal of his high ambition in the pathway which is lighted by the bright star of Susquehanna.

His loyalty and his smiling countenance have won for him a place in the hearts of his fellows. When a Freshman, he acted as a Freshman; but when he became a Sophomore, he put away fresh things after the true manner of the Death House Crew. Many and mysterious are the schemes of deviltry which his fertile mind evolves for the amusement and entertainment of his less inventive brethren. Often are the echoes of the night awakened as a result, and, peculiar indeed, are the situations that sometimes follow. A common expression of his is, "Gentlemen, the peace is too dead. What can we do to stir up things? O! I have an idea!"

His broadmindedness is shown by the diversity of his hobbies. In athletics, he has taken an active part and likewise in all college activities. He is very fond of animals, having in his possession a number of horses whose ancestry can be traced back to classical antiquity. He is a voracious reader, delving into the works of all the ages. The tales of knighthood and chivalry seem to have taken an especially firm hold on his imagination if we may judge by his actions. In true knightly fashion, he has repeatedly stormed the well-nigh impregnable castle, Seibert Hall, and it is said that he has at last succeeded in capturing from among its treasures, a heart of gold, which he declares was the one thing lacking in his ministerial equipment.

But seriously, he is a MAN. What more can be said of anyone? As such, we feel assured of his success in the chosen life work.

Three years ago the Capitol City sent forth this gaunt and loosely connected young man. At first we thought him bashful, but after becoming better acquainted with him, we find him to be a regular guy and with an automobile. Jerry is an enthusiast of all athletics and although he only participates in basketball, he attends all games of the other various sports and makes known his loyalty, by very emphatic language.

Guy is a very good student and always recites when given the opportunity. Although he is one of the younger members of the class, Jerry shows very good judgment and rare business talent; accordingly he was elected the Business Manager of this Annual.

As to his love affairs, we are unable to tell definitely but he has recently taken dancing lessons and now receives numerous telephone calls from the neighboring city.

Nothing but a prosperous future can be predicted for Guy, as his straightforwardness has won for him a host of friends and will lead him on to incommensurable success.

"Darnit"

Dunny came to us a green and rustic one in the fall of '17. Some how or other he managed to survive his term under the green dink without succumbing to the rigor of the Sophomore rules. By the theory of evolution he became a high and mighty sophomore and in his turn helped to grind the emerald hued horde under the iron heel of tyranny.

As one of the regulars on the Varsity Football Squad this year, Dunny is showing some real "stuff" on the gridiron. In concise terms, in his position at end, he ends his opponents gains around end.

Football isn't his only game. He likes the little game of hearts and judging from the photographs that adorn his table, Dame Fortune has'nt always turned her back on him. Last year he was an ardent seeker after knowledge in the study of ornithology and seemed to take great interest in studying the ways of the "Birdies." This year it appears as though he has lost something for which he is always hunting. Some say it is a mystery that he is trying to unravel but whatever it is, he seems to have found the missing "Link" which is the key to the whole affair.

Did some one ask about his class work? We had better touch upon this subject lightly. He believes in the axiom, "All knowledge is not contained in books." Also that you do not need Analytical Geometry to figure the angle of a bank shot in the side pocket.

Dunny is a loyal classmate and we all wish him the best of luck after he has been graduated from S. U., and completed his course in further study.

"Jaggers"

By what divine decree of Providence, we became the ones upon whom the most benign smile of Dame Fortune rested, and as a result received into our midst this promising young follower of Aristotle, Bacon, and Kant, we know not. He came to us at the beginning of our Freshman year, bringing with him the accumulated knowledge and wisdom of that famed institution of learning, Gettysburg Academy. With such zeal, indeed, does he pursue the elusive God of Truth, passing sleepless nights for it; giving up for it laborious days; delving for it unceasingly in books of forgotten lore and among decaying bones of saints and philosophers, propounders of creeds whose devotees have long since disappeared; searching for it among the great men of Mind; pursuing it to its last hiding place in the brains of our learned Doctors,—so absorbed indeed is he in this pursuit of Truth and the acquisition of knowledge, that we start and wonder that yet withal,—Milo has not forgotten to live.

From the very regions from which "Jaggers" hails, one can easily infer that he is filled with stirring tales of old Cambria and the wilds of the picturesque Allegheny's, of which he never tires telling to his wearied listeners. He has also had a visit from Cupid, as almost every man has in college, and longs for the time when the chosen one shall reign as queen of the parsonage while he performs his pastoral duties. But with all these eccentricities, he is a big hearted soul and ever ready to lend a helping hand or borrow the needed dollar. Judging from his integrity, his willingness to care for those in distress and his ever ready smile, he will in his chosen calling be a power in helping to regenerate the human race.

"Dog Gone the Luck"

By what vicissitude of fate, this beneficent of fortunes most gracious smiles should come in our midst and seek the acquisition of knowledge with the Class of '21, we cannot determine. However, by his coming, both the Class has been honored and Susquehanna has gained the privilege of training a truly great character for service among men.

"Bill" has a winning personality, and his pleasant smile, good nature, and willingness to do something for another has won him hosts of friends.

Having spent three years in the Academy, he is one of the "old guys" around the Institution. We can remember when in our Freshman days when most of us were truly green, that it was Bill who taught us the ways of the unsophisticated and led us safely through the trials and perils of the first year at college.

In all activities that pertain to Susquehanna, there is no more loyal and faithful worker than our classmate "Bill." As a musician, he is a rival of Orpheus, and whether it be in the band, orchestra, or quartette, he is there doing his best. In athletics, he has always taken an active part and besides being the Manager of various sports, he is a basketball and tennis player of no mean calibre. Moreover, "Bill" is a conscientious student and in class work or in literary activities, he is par excellent.

However, William has one failing, that is, the power to withstand the alluring charms of the gentler sex. He is one of those regulars who frequent the confines of Seibert Hall and is also indicted to the disease of Campusty and Moveitis. Being a singer as we have before noted, he is often filling the air with melody of song and if out of the stillness, the sweet strains of K'K'Katy come to your hearing, you may be sure that "Bill" is near.

Like a true son of Susquehanna, his theme in life is service to his fellow men and possessing all these faculties which distinguish great men, we need only wait for time to give him a chance of proving himself and his name will be placed among those in the halls of fame.

Prior to his affiliation with Susquehanna, Clarence spent his time in Somerset County, where he was born and raised on a farm. His early walks and talks with nature had a convincing result with him, which caused him to interpret P. C. not as "plow corn" but as "Preach Christ." Accordingly, we now find him a student at S. U. and a classmate in his preparation for his calling in life.

Clarence has long ago cast aside the role of bachelor and is the proud possessor of a home and family. Naturally, his attentions must be divided between the family and the school work, and you may see him walking about the campus with an armful of books or superintending the locomotion of his matrimonial fruit basket to and from town.

He is one of Clio Literary Society's staunchest friends and is quite active in the work of the Y. M. C. A. As a student, he is to be respected and indeed his industriousness would be a fitting aspiration to all who know him.

To Clarence, we wish the greatest success and we feel certain that he will create a future for himself that will be a credit to the Class of '21.

"Fat" came among us to prove that Dalmatia is on the map. And although we have a somewhat hazy conception as to just where it is, we're almost ready to believe that it's there with the goods, considering their representative at Susquehanna.

This is the way he does it. He goes about things in his quiet, unassuming way; doing well that which is to be done. He takes an active part in all three of the major sports and during the last season has won his numerals in football. Although he has never made the Varsity, he sticks to his job eternally and with determined loyalty to Susquehanna.

In fact, he has never been known to lose his heart in any sort of venture save one and from this particular one he has not yet recovered from the shock. It is feared that his complete recovery will never be effected without the help of a certain young lady from Laurelton, Pennsylvania, who is said to exert a mysterious hypnotic influence over him.

He has not decided what his life work will be. True to his nature he is waiting and watching to find that niche which he was intended to fill. When this is found, we expect him to take up his work and still impelled by steady determination; to drive on and on to his goal.

"Steinie"

The above is a portrait of a sincere and devoted member of the class. He is a quiet, generous and self-reliant person. As a student he is an honest and steady plugger (at times most too steady). Whatever he undertakes, he accomplishes. He entered the class from the Academy; always taking an active part in all the organizations of the Institution especially in the Literary Society and the Y. M. C. A. of which he is now Vice-President.

What cares he for marks? His disposition shows that what he has obtained in his humble way, of this no one can deprive him. He is endowed with a sort of inventive genius and ably shows this in several particulars. Oft times he may be seen head in hands, saying nothing, but thinking deeply; when you find him in this mood, do not bother him. For some day he will be the master of his invention. Another ambition of his is to be a Caruso (probably the second) or a Paderewski, Jr.

"Steinie" has shown few signs of his admiration or love for the fairer sex. But some of his classmates have noticed that he attends church services on Sunday evenings quite regularly. There's a reason. Who knows?

"Steinie" is a character whose glory is in accomplishment and not in actions of immediate praise and honor. He has heeded the call to the ministry, and in this high calling we wish him abundant success. However, such as his future lot may be, we feel certain that he will be a credit both to the Class of '21 and to his Alma Mater.

"Oh! Thunder"

Look! Look! Sure and it's "Ted" all right. Why the name itself is enough to tell anyone that he is a favorite with the ladies. He tells us that music is the reason for his being at the Dorm every day, week in and week out, but as much as we would like to believe this alibi, it certainly is hard to conceive of such being the case after becoming acquainted with this Hagerstown lad.

Ted came to Susquehanna in 1917 and by diligent application to his studies, we find him in the midst of the worthy Juniors of the class of '21. He is activity personified, for in everything that pertains to college affairs you can always depend on it that Ted will be there.

During the term of the S. A. T. C. at Susquehanna, "Ted" was certainly the benighted friend of all friends to everyone, for on account of the fewness of summer suns that had passed over his head he was ineligible for military service and thus escaped the military regulations which prevailed for the majority of the students. Therefore, when that wee small voice from within spoke to his fellow classmen and they were not able to hie away to the restaurant, "Teddy" like a good Samaritan was always on the job.

"Ted" says "that some day when he grows up, for he is only a miserable 6 feet-2 inches in height, he is going to buy a whole candy store for himself because half of the time the Jigger Shop can't keep a decent supply in stock for his daily consumption.

The Class of '21 is looking forward to the day when we can refer to "Ted" as the Honorable Mathias P. Möller, Jr., for great things are expected from this most estimable young man.

Though "Zech" lives in a college community, he preferred Susquehanna to State College, and in the Fall of 1917, he arrived in our midst. No indeed, nothing green about him. He was wise to the ways of colleges. It only took a few days until every one in the school knew and liked "Zech." Nor does this liking decrease with time for the longer you know "Zech," the better you like him.

To the call for football candidates, "Zech" has always answered, and for three successive years he had made good on the gridiron. Moreover he takes a lively interest in all college activities. He has been seldom known to miss breakfast or a day of school, even though he did stay up a little later than usual studying the night before.

"Zech" has always been a good student, but this year he has surprised all of us in the way that he has tackled his lessons and by his recitations. However, he has one bad habit and that is the tendency to take a nap in class, and it is not infrequent that we hear in Psychology: "Now, now, Vergil, sit up and pay attention."

But to some of us it would seem that "Zech's" natural bend was toward the fairer sex. There are very few girls in the Dormitory who cannot boast of an evening spent in "Zech's" desirable company. However, all his attentions along this line are not confined to Susquehanna alone, but Selinsgrove and Sunbury, each receive a share of it.

Yet "Zech" is not merely a ladies man, for he is most energetic and industrious in any other matter that presents itself. He is a good Business man and in view of this was elected Assistant Business Manager of the *Lan-

In all "Zech" leads a well balanced life. He has won the good will of all and we wish him the greatest success in anything that he undertakes.

This classmate of ours was born on a farm near Salem in Snyder County. Being born on a farm, "Cus" knew what work meant, and that he possesses the trait of industry is proven by his reputation as a student.

Long ago when they founded S. U. Academy "Cus" enrolled as a student and started the preparation to enter the Class of '19, which he did. When the call came "to arms," he answered that call and enlisted in the great volunteer that represented the Keystone State—the 28th, or Iron Division. For all this, he paid the price—two years of college life. Those who knew "Cus" before the war and to those who know him today, there is a different man. Today he is a seasoned veteran of war, thoughtful, a better student and a man who has seen considerable of the world.

"Cus" has had the experience of teaching school, having been a pedagogue for several years. Although he says that pretty girls attended the school that he was teaching, yet he never fell to their alluring charms. But do not think him a woman hater. After study hours you find him very thoughtful—for he is thinking of where he was last year—he recollects and thinks on, for it is just about a year ago that he met a pretty French maiden and fell in love, as he himself admits. However, he used the same old story again and told her—e'en told her that after he returned to America and told his people of his love, he would come back to her. He tells you this, then his mind wanders back to the sunny hillsides of France, and he wonders if she is really waiting.

Whatever line of work "Cus" follows in after life, we know that he will succeed for he is made of real stuff, Success.

"Dutch"

Here he is, the worthy classman of ours, who drifted down to Susquehanna in the Fall of '17 from the mysterious city of McClure. True to nature and his home town instincts, Dutch was one of the hardest to become acquainted with. In fact, it was fully two months until he made himself known and then we find him as a good looking, sweet dispositioned little chap with knee "breeches."

It was not long till he became actively engaged in the activities of Susquehanna and he soon began to be a frequenter of Seibert Hall. Now he not misled, gentle reader, it was necessary that he be seen in this place because of his assuming the office of University Mail Clerk.

Like the other big boys, Dutch enlisted in the Army and distinguished himself as one of our worthy Corporals though some of the less fortunate "Privates" seemed to think that he made a better looking Boy Scout than an S. A. T. C. officer. However by the time that he was out of the Army and had assumed his new man-like suit of long trousers, most of his former bashfulness and excessive modesty were overcome and Dutch became one of the fellows, displaying his sociability, keen sense of humor (especially when the joke is on some other person) and surprising personality.

In regard to his love affairs, much could be said, but it will suffice to say that even though he is prone to like VARIETY, he longs for the time when he may go back home fully inflated with learning and claim Mabel as his own.

In class work Dutch is an ardent and honest worker and although he at times gets things a bit confused when reciting from his unusual store of former knowledge, he detests the word "Unprepared" and always manages to say something.

We predict great things for this ambitious student and feel confident that his future will be a success.

But with the passing of time and the discovery of trots, he gradually grew and developed until in the present age we find him at the apex of collegiate attainment. He has accomplished almost everything that is on the slate, including a natural ability to get through classes on his wits.

But do not think that Hank does not study for he has been known at times to spend as much as fifteen minutes on one Trig problem. But then, Trig gets us all.

Strange to say, Hank has not yet succumbed to the fairer sex. That is, no one in particular; he simply loves them all. Yet in spite of this, we predict great things for him. However we must not think that Marie's schedule consists solely of Campuistry. She is a diligent student, having dropped her studies for almost a year in order to find out how it feels to be a school marm, and returning to Susquehanna again in the Fall Term of our Junior year as one of our classmates. Not only is she a diligent student but an active member of Philo and Y. W. C. A. We have never known her to refuse to take her place when duty called her. Here comes "Mose," the genius of the class. Hailing from Mechanicsburg, this gallant little lad entered upon his studies at S. U. in the Fall of '17. His keen intellect and pleasing personality wins for him the admiration of all with whom he becomes acquainted. He is a "jack of all trades," ranging from a first class warrior of the S. A. T. C. to the most diligent student in college; and when it comes to doping out chemical equations he has everything stopped around the place. His wonderful intellectual ability does not extend along the line of Chemistry alone but he is also a math. wizard, for he occasionally makes his Profs and fellow classmates sit up and take notice by his ability to solve the intricate problems of that worthy science, so called, "Trig."

As to his love affairs, Mose is a believer in the Proverbial phrase, "Variety is the spice of life," also taking a special delight in frequenting Joe's Dancing Aquarium at Norry.

His favorite pastime is that wonderful art of photography. At almost any time of night one may find Mose in a little room without any windows, situated in the basement of the Science Hall. This little room is known as the "dark room" not on account of any foul deeds being committed there but because of its seclusion from the light of the world.

We now leave this young man, and whatever fate holds in store, we are sure it will be a prosperous and glorious future, if his present ability and popularity are at all prophetic.

Knee high to a grasshopper, with a serious smile, and shoulders as willing as Atlas, this little giant which nature endowed with a silver tongue, and then in anxiety to create a creature of rare intelligence evidently got the wrong formula and built a man of rather limited proportions; found his way from the green, rustic clods of Lycoming to the back gate of enlightenment and college.

Having unusual talent and a tactfully mixed compound of good will and grit, he soon threw off those primitive mannerisms and is now one of the popular personages of the upper classes.

"Chub" believes in the old adage that "men are measured from their chin up," and so is consistently approaching Bill Penn's hat as a mental limit, feasting on Greek roots, History dates, and the like.

Abounding in wit and grace, he has not only "buffaloed" his classmates into thinking that he is a model student (a small imitation of the real thing), but has secured for himself a much coveted drag with all the Profs.

Maurice is never weary of painting with that lingual brush, a waistcoat for young Robin Redbreast; decking Queen Dido's crown with meadow-cup and briar rose; or stocking the larder of the honey bee with sweet incense and sublime sayings. Although often attempting to prove the practicability of a perpetual motion machine in revolutionizing industry, he is a Classical student with Latin and Greek as his hobbies.

Gortner is wide awake and is alive to the signs of the times. He has a winning personality and is at present one of the conspicuous men in college affairs at Susquehanna.

Several years ago there was born in the mountainous regions surrounding Altoona, Pa., a beautiful, dimple cheeked papoose. The above is a very good portrait of what it grew to be. Little did the anxious Mother realize that some day her baby boy would aspire the genius of a great military general. Having an actual inclination for war he set out upon his college career at Gettysburg but finding that Institution too crowded to allow for his too rapid expansion, he turned to S. U.

Like an Alexander of old he held the hill above the University as his domination until Hannibal the Great and his forces came from Williamsport and laid waste to the same. However "Slivers" doesn't let things like this bother him, with a motto "Girls are just like street cars, along every five minutes," he keeps captivating the fair Co-eds who come to Susquehanna. Besides being all this he has turned to be one of our strong gridiron warriors and on several occasions has carried the "pig skin" back of Susquehanna's goal posts.

His father is a minister and so it is quite natural that this is his great ambition. We feel that some day this loyal classmate of ours will head some of the greatest moral and religious reforms of mankind.

Last Fall during the S. A. T. C. this blond haired lad came to us from the lumber City of Williamsport, Pa., and has proven himself a real student and a likeable fellow to all who know him.

Having learned this art in his home town, he has undertaken to impart to the less fortunate of us, this delightful knowledge. Although he is reputed to have broken many hearts, yet he denies that he has ever been in love and indeed asks how it feels to be thus.

His favorite hobby seems to be Chemistry, for at almost any time during the day he may be found in or about the Laboratory. Also if the Laboratory could speak, we feel sure that it would disclose many a practical joke that this follower of science has performed to the discomfort of his fellows.

He is an earnest and loyal worker of our college Band and quite frequently is called upon to assist in other musical organizations about the town, where his talent is much appreciated. At one time he was offered a position in the famous and renowned Barnum and Bailey's Circus Band but refused it on account of his future career. We know that Jim would make a good man for a circus band because of his endurance which he acquires from much talking and eating. Oh yes, he can eat, for he comes from a part of country where they learn that art very proficiently. A man is just out of luck if he eats at the same table with Jim.

But Jim has time for other things besides music and food. When he first arrived here he was the most bashful man in his class, but with a little training he soon climbed to the highest ring in the social ladder and is now quite popular with the ladies. He attends all the social functions down town and divides his time between seven of the fair sex and is always happy for the privilege of sharing his affection on the entire squad of his lady friends.

We all wonder when Jim studies, for he surely must do some, for he carries the heaviest schedule of the class, and what is more he never fails to recite when called upon. He never worries about his exams, but nevertheless, he goes through with a rush which is one of his characteristics for he is always in a hurry. He is an ardent worker in all that he does and we predict a success for him in the life work which he has chosen.

We truly welcome him and all that he has for us.

All who know this lad will agree that he holds the place of "King" among his friends. Whenever some stunt or trick is to be done, "Myson" is sure to be in it and rather often the instigator of the plan. He proved to be a "Johnny on the spot" when that shrill voice rang out—; this happened mostly on mornings after a slight snowfall, covering the walks and ways across the campus. Then under these circumstances, he it was who made our pathway clear. No one has ever gotten the best of him. He always wore the expression on his face that seems to say, "I'll get you—even if I have to resort to ducking from my window."

With all these traits he has proven himself to be a student and has always taken an active part in the organizations of the Institution, especially in that of the Y. M. C. She seldom "cuts" classes, although at times she is not there to answer to the calling of her name, but gets there before the class is dismissed. Olive is very studious but once in a while she does "flunk" in her classes, but it is—once in a while.

In all social activities, Olive is always to take part. She is one fitting to be put on an "eats" committee for she knows what is good, and always does her share in seeing that nothing is left over.

It is known that Olive has had "flames of love" and at one time an industrious Bible student, always studying the Psalms because David—wrote them. One great fault of our classmate is that she can never get to any place on time. She is often seen coming to Society, Chapel, and classes late, but we hope that she will overcome this fault.

He is very popular at that hall of mystery known to the world as Seibert Hall. But why should he not be popular, for in addition to his good looks and pleasing disposition he is said to have a stand in with the theatres of Sunbury.

"Benny" proved his mettle in the recent world war, winning the Croix de Guerre for meritorious service with the famous ambulance unit Number 574. Benny was also entitled to attend officer's mess, so brave was he. He has a very melodious voice although at times it does become a trifle monotonous listening to him sentimentally warbling "Anything is Nice if it comes from Dixie Land," and other southern love songs, yet it must be said in all fairness to him that he is unfortunate, living nearly a thousand miles from his amoureuse.

Athletically, "Benny" is a confirmed lover of out-door life, taking about an hours horseback ride nearly every morning. He is also a genius in other lines for 'tis said that when he and his roommate wanted to play a little sociable game of African Pool and "Benny" could not find the bones, he calmly took two lumps of sugar and used them for bones. Surely only a genius could have done that.

He has proven himself a star athlete and has held that reputation since his Freshman days until the present time, having won an "S" in almost every branch of athletics.

As a student—well "Deacon" was never afflicted with any disease brought about by over study, but has always held a good class record and has never been known to miss a recitation without a just cause. However with all his eagerness to learn from books, he firmly believes that the association with his fellow students is of great importance, and many a student has had the pleasure of his frequent visits and social chats.

His love affairs are not confined to Seibert Hall, for he believes in sharing his love with the many. Sunbury seems to be his field of romance, and many a nickel has been spent in car fare to that city. He says, however, "that it was money well spent."

In the Spring of '17, when the Susquehanna Unit was organized, "Deacon" enlisted and served with this Company throughout the war. He was 1st Sergeant of the Section and his dealings with the men was of such a nature that commanded the love and respect of all. He was known to his men as "General Bing," and indeed, his war record was held in so high an estimation that the city of Chamburg honored him by naming their longest boulevard "Sweeley's Alley."

To "Deacon" we may well predict the brightest future. If it be the Ministry or other contemplated study, we wish him the greatest success.

"Phil" "Pop"

The good-looking young man portrayed above is known in his home town by the name of Philip, but to his classmates as "Pop." He came among us, pure, innocent and unsophisticated, and has retained these qualities through two years of college life. Although he served two years in the service of his country, yet his speech remains remarkably free from those impurities that so often characterizes an ex-soldier. This is due, no doubt, to the fact that while in France, in which country he spent 18 months, his struggles to obtain a French vocabulary restricted his acquisition of the private's vernacular. 'Twas he who promulgated the theory that to learn French one must study her. Reports from the battlefields of Paris indicate that he was an able champion of his theory.

After being released from the service and attending to the several sweethearts who had patiently awaited his return to civil life he again graced the portals of our beloved college and became a member of the illustrious class of 1921.

His nickname "Pop" is characteristic. It should not, however, be interpreted literally, for as yet to him the state of matrimony is an uncharted wild. His week-end pilgrimages indicate that his single blessedness is entirely volitional. As a student he is all that the term implies, pursuing faithfully and diligently the mystic sheepskin. His athletic activities have been hampered to a great extent by the course in sociology which he has diligently pursued in the environs of the neighborhood, but he took enough time from this fascinating pastime to make the scrub baseball team in 1917. He intends to study medicine, and will, no doubt, sometime write prescriptions for some of his former classmates who have been seriously affected by the latest constitutional amendment.

The above is a very antique and rustic likeness of our "Old Bolshevik," who made his first appearance upon the campus of S. U. in the fall of 1918; having completed his freshman year very successfully and with advanced credits from Juniata College, he was very capable of entering the honorable class of '21.

The heart of this "Old Bolshevik" is not as black as the term implies; although he will go on a rampage, and his roommate being absent, will rough-house his own room and then pounce upon the first that gains entrance, as his prey. Once upon a time he was accused of decking the front of the lawn and portico of his professors with his few and scanty belongings. Upon returning from his night out he could have been heard singing softly and sweetly "Mary! Mary! You're the girl for me." But back of it all one can see by his actions that love lingers deep down in the unfathomed depths of his little black heart for his Mary, old Pal of Mine.

With all this he has shown other developments; for example, in the field of music, he is an artist. His talent as a soloist is known throughout the vicinity of Belleville and all over the state. Upon his letter file are the programs dating back to February 22nd, 1904, when he made his debut at a Washington's Birthday celebration in the little red school-house of his native village. He very ably showed his musical talent as a cornetist in the renowned Susquehanna S. A. T. C. Band. As a reader and as a debater his ability also ranks high.

His future life is undetermined but such as his lot may be, we all wish him abundant success. We can feel assured that he will be an honor both to his Alma Mater and to the class of '21.

"By Gosh"

"Bobby" "Bay Bee Bobb"

Upon gazing out over our Campus in the fall of 1918, we were able to observe a young man with a look of determination that meant success in anything that he might undertake. The above is his portrait, that of Byron B. Bobb our delightful classmate hailing from the town of Herndon, Penn. After graduating from Herndon High School he then went to Sunbury High that he might be better fitted to enter upon his college career. He was known as a brilliant student there and there was nothing too difficult for him to attempt and since coming to S. U. he has certainly upheld his reputation. At almost any hour of the night he may be found in his room studying diligently and then the next morning he will keep the entire Economics class disturbed with his melodious snoring.

Byron's ambition in life is to be a doctor and in his calling we are sure that he will be a success and that in the future we will hear of the famous physician and surgeon, Dr. Bobb. Heart troubles and amputations will certainly be his specialty for he has such a pleasant and attractive way about him that he will certainly cure these with his kind words and if he "takes" a woman's pulse she will certainly be a life long patient of his. He also intends to amputate people painlessly from their pocket-books, which is also in his new phase of medicine.

Bobby is always a good companion and is always ready to help whatever he can, especially in any anarchistic chemical explosions in the laboratory. Taking a glance at him one might think he was rather a calm fellow, although from his aptitude of mind and irony, we assure you not to be deceived, as occasionally he is known to assume a stormy condition. From youth he has had high and lofty ideals concerning his life work, and our desire is that they may be realized.

"Red"

This youth is a natural production of Selinsgrove, having been created near the banks of the ancient and historical Penn's Creek. As a typical young man he is symmetrically proportioned having a strong and robust body, with his cephalic extremity beautifully adorned with a reddish colored covering from which he has derived his name "Red." His caudal appendages are distinctly outlined with strong athletic muscles and so proportioned that they reach the entire distance from his body to the ground.

Within the volume of time through which he has passed, he has been a firm believer in athletics and both in his High School and College career, has taken an active part in all branches of athletic sports.

He entered college with the Class of '20, but for unknown reasons took to the pick and shovel as a means to accumulate pecuniary wealth, but after the absence of a year he again returned to his Alma Mater and became affiliated with the illustrious Class of '21. Owing to the distance which he is compelled to traverse in his journeys to and from the halls of instruction, he frequently approaches the class room late so that many times we fail to hear the familiar words by which he expresses his presence, nevertheless, his intentions are good and his aims are high, and he is constantly striving toward his great purpose in life, "Chemical Engineering." We wish him the greatest success.

Mildred first adorned the campus of Susquehanna in the Fall of '18, but this year her increased amount of knowledge enabled her to join the ranks of the Class of '21. She is a good student, cutting three Chemistry tests and still receiving one of the highest grades in the class.

However, all of her time is not spent in studying. She takes an active part in Y. W. C. A. and in the Literary Society. And when called upon to assist in any social function, she is always to do her part. She is most accomplished as a reader, in fact, her talent along that line is so well developed that whenever a noise is heard during study hours—Mildred receives the blame. Although not taking vocal lessons, she is able to sing exceptionally well, "Drop a nickel on the drum." Her practice hours usually being from 9:30 until 10:15 o'clock when Mrs. Jesson escorts her to Room No. 17 on second floor.

In order that you may not mistake her for some of the other girls in the Dorm, we might describe her as rather short and very thin (?). However, if her increasing ability as an eater continues, she will be a minus quantity. Room No. 11 is the place usually visited when "Mid" wishes to satisfy the "inner man."

As yet, Mildred has not been wounded severely by any of Cupid's arrows. But, as we understand that nowhere in her relationship are there any old maids, we can prophecy for her a successful career as a teacher and finally a very important factor in a home of her own.

"Kid" "Stew"

Be not hasty to judge this noble personage by the map here represented, for "Stew" is not such a mild, calm, angelic creature as you might at first suppose. He is one of those mysterious characters whom it is hard to eulogize upon, for his college activities are concerned both with night and day.

"Stew" resides in our college town and entered the classic halls of Susquehanna in '16, but upon deciding to follow his wild and daring desires, he was absent for a year only to return with a grim determination to reach the final goal. He is a very zealous student and very seldom is heard to say "not prepared."

He is not of the sober and stern kind but is always on the spot when it comes to making merry and yet we cannot say that he is frivolous, for his jokes are all timely and his humorous stories are always the latest. Yet despite the fact that he is the congenial type, his good nature has to a certain degree been lost during the past few months, and often we can hear him lamenting the loss of his "spiritual" inspirations.

For this ardent student we predict a bright future, for "Stew" possesses the real qualities of a man. He aims to be a Chemical Engineer and we of the Class of '21 feel certain that some day we will be able to look upon him holding a place of honor in this vocation.

"Maj"

Ah, dear reader, like many great men, here is a concentrated bunch of energy always doing something and making his influence felt among his fellows. "Maj" has a wonderful ability of making plain just what he means especially when in an indignant mood.

His college course has been rather broken up, as he was one of the men who heard his Country's call and served eighteen months in the foreign land. He has also shown his mettle on the gridiron, being one of the most faithful in reporting for practice; and as a pilot of the Scrubs helped much in developing the Varsity.

"Maj" seems to possess an affinity for the bewitching charms of the opposite sex, and many times during the wee, small hours of the night you can hear him slowly and wearily making his way to the haven of slumber, exclaiming with fervor "Diss—is—er" O! "Diss—is—er."

However, he is not always serious, for many times during the day one can hear his outbursts of laughter issuing from his humble abode. As a student, he is one of those extraordinary persons who have the ability of reciting in class without any preparation.

"Maj" is a clean cut young man and we are sure that whatever he chooses as his profession, he will prove worthy of his Alma Mater and will reflect honor to the Class of '21.

"For heaven's sake, these fall winds blow no good," exclaimed one of the old veterans of S. U. as he gazed upon this awe-stricken and peculiar specimen of humanity standing in the center of our large and luxurious campus. As this doubtful bit of life gazed about him, some peculiar and rustic sounds gurgled from the aperture which receives nourishment hourly. After wasting much time strolling about the premises aimlessly, he fortunately fell into the hands of that fatherly man better known as 'Prexy." However, in a few days the green began to wear off this molecular piece of flesh and bone and he was better able to keep his equilibrium at S. U. Later we heard rumors and upon observation found his large pedestrian prints stamped with all the glory of Snyder County mud upon the recently painted porch of the Schoch home. Again this villainous monster and desperado had been at his terrible act of "cradle robbing." As time progressed, and the unrelenting paddles of the upperclassmen reduced his cranial swelling, the atmosphere around him became more susceptible for animal and plant life to exist in. This vertebrae, (and they shot men like Lincoln) has been quite noisy throughout his college days. Especially in the morning, after he has been out until the wee hours, one can plainly hear him for two blocks making use of that inexhaustible vocabulary which he possesses. He is now undergoing the treatment of the Classical course which not only gives Greek, Latin and Hebrew, but an excess of profanity which at times is his chief study.

The fog, by this time having partly cleared, we are now able to view this young man with a different aspect. Although not one of the athletic warriors of S. U., he has proved himself worthy of that fame, which is alone attributed to Susquehanna. He is one of the most studious men of the University and we, the class of '21, heartily welcome him to us.

Behold the man of mystery. Those deep blue eyes give an inkling of the mysterious nature of this individual; that Roman nose tells the tale of hidden power; that sandy hair is like unto the light and airy clouds floating above immeasurable empty space. This man is an Edison for ideas; a Cicero for oratory; a Caruso for song; a Newton for science; a Hercules for strength; and a Perry for exploration. Verily, often the ringing of his prospecting pick has awakened the echoes of the silent night in his tireless search for hidden treasure and coveted honor. Often in the still night have the silvery tones of his majestic voice risen from his bird-like throat to enthrall in wondrous ecstasy the fair and gentle Coeds.

Many and varied as are the accomplishments of this man, his chief obsession lies in the direction of Chemistry. His ambition is to rise to the very peak of human attainment in this profession. Surely we may expect genius to bud forth in this man for we feel assured that all these talents so varied and so remarkable were not visited in any one individual of ordinary caliber.

In the various organizations with which he has been affiliated, his loyalty and devotion have excited the wonder and admiration of all. In summing up the characteristics of Clarence, we cannot but express firm belief in his ultimate triumph over the difficulties of life for he has demonstrated to us his determination to do and to be what he wills, regardless of external hindrances and temporary consequences.

"The dence you say"

A most peculiar specimen of humanity in this chap who may be seen wandering around the campus of Susquehanna in his own peculiar gait. During his college life previous to the war he was rather lax in his school work but since he has resumed his course at S. U., it is evident that he has awakened somewhat to the realization of the responsibilities of life, and hence we find him a little more regular in class attendance. However, during his leisure hours, he has pedestals propped up on the table, pipe in his mouth, discussing the vital problems of the day with his associates. His never failing companion and comforter is his pipe without which he is rarely seen when it is permissible to use it.

His main activities in college life are baseball, penny ante, and a certain abhorrence for his studies. This rather drowsy looking chap owing to his bashful nature has not broken many hearts among the gentler sex, his motto being: "All things come to those who only stand and wait."

Dutch is a big hearted soul and ever ready to lend a helping hand or borrow the needed dollar. We see nothing but a bright future for him in the medical world which profession he has chosen for his life work. The following lines are characteristic of this chap:

Now what do you know about this? Well of course its Helen, who said it was'nt! And this is not the first time her name has appeared in the annals of '21. Helen took her preparatory course in the S. U. Academy and joined us as a Freshman, from her "Prep" experiences knowing how to do things around Susquehanna. She does them too. Ask the "eats" committee, when any class affair is about to come off if you do not believe it.

When it comes to real hard study, Helen is right there (just before examinations). Much midnight oil is burned during that last awful week. But then, what of it; she always manages to get a 90+ for all that. From all indications, chemistry seems to be her subject to others.

It is hard to tell just what this fair classmate may do. She has never been fatally injured by Cupid's darts while here at school but in the balmy summer time, Helen likes to visit in Center County and we are inclined to believe that the mountainous region has become the center of attraction for her. We hope that she will not rush it too much, for there is still another year for us of 1921 to be together and we would hate to lose her from among our ranks.

Just as the flowers cannot exist without the sunbeams so the Class of '21 could not get along without Helen. To her, go our best wishes for success and happiness.

Here's to Archie, a right good sport, an amiable jovial comrade and classmate. A diligent and sincere student who never says "not prepared", when called upon to recite. This young veteran comes to us and joins our class after a year and a half of study at Albright College, six years experience of teaching, and one year of military service in the A. E. F. in France.

He has the appearance of a gentleman, youthful, but his work in classroom indicates that he possesses by no means a meager education. He is an excellent historian, possessing a rare ability to remember dates. This art, without a doubt, he has acquired by the frequent use of his calendar, in order that he may never disappoint any of the fairer sex who seek his attentions.

In former years, this classmate was more or less interested in the success of the I.T.K. Club and other similiar organizations, but it appears that his experience in France and Italy has altered him to the extent that he has become more interested in the serious matters of life. However let it be understood that he is all seriousness, for he adds greatly to the noise of the band by his artistic performances on the slide-trombone. He is especially proficient on high and loud notes. He also has studied French to the extent that he can say "Bon jour ma cherie," and can read meaning into it.

Be this as it may, we can predict nothing but success for him in future life, and we except great things in the educational realm, to come by the hand and brain of our worthy classmate.

Sophomore Class History

TIME on its swift pinions, has completed another cycle. The clock of ages has ticked off another year, and we, as a class, have climbed another round higher on the ladder of fame since the historian last fulfilled his functions in recording the progress of 1922.

Being Sophomores has not inflated us above measure, and we have been able to proceed at a moderate pace without the aid of crutches. Persevering effort wins, and our predecessors frown ominously as they hear our "study" tramp close behind, while their "horses" are playing out from over exhaustion.

With our advent as Sophomores, the vacancy created was filled with green timber from "Prepdom". It was plainly evident that the forest from which they were hewn had long before their time been robbed of its best timber—else why this underbrush that borders on the evergreen. The Freshmen thought that it was up to them to start something, so they painted their numerals the first week of their arrival, showing us that they were on the job. However, the children were surprised when a few discovered that the Sophs had been at work the night before and had pasted posters around the campus and on the buildings as well as about town.

The annual tie-up, which according to the ruling of the upper classmen was held on Warner Field, on the second Thursday after the term opened; and although we were outnumbered nearly three to one, we entered the fight with the same grit that carried us through the year previous. After ten minutes of desperate struggling, we were defeated when all but one of our men were carried from the field.

We were unfortunate in losing several members of our class, but are glad to note that they are all making good in their present professions. Much as we regret our loss, we are favored with the presence of several who in the past few years have been doing service for their "Uncle Sam."

With this digression, the historian will again to his own noted class. Realizing, dear classmates, that we have but two years more until we must bid good-bye, there comes to our mind the fact that we have so long been joined together in a community of aims and interests; so often met and mingled our thoughts in confidential friendship; so often worked and planned together, that it seems like rending asunder the very tissues of the heart to be separated at the end of our college days.

Freshman Class History

HEN on the seventeenth of September, Susquehanna threw open her gates to the incoming students for the year of 1919-1920, the professors and upper classmen were much surprised to see the new Ford truck approach the campus filled with trunks, heralding the arrival of the Class of '23. Promising young men and women from the four corners of the state constituted this large class which was about to be enrolled.

During the first night, our would be superiors, the Sophs, endeavored to lay down the rules which were to guide our unsophisticated beings through the first year at college. These proclamations, however, soon vanished from S.U.'s campus.

The class organized two days after the arrival. After electing officers and choosing the class motto and colors, the class adjourned with a determination to make a record for the Class of '23, of which Susquehanna may be proud.

One week later, the annual tie-up between the Freshmen and Sophs took place. Our class will ever be proud of having scored higher than any previous class, the final tally being 16-0. The honorable Sophs now realized that they didn't have cowards with which to deal, but a class which was able to stand for its rights.

The Freshmen were soon admitted into the various organizations of the college. The interest that has been shown by this class in the worth while activities will finally place it among the banner classes of Susquehanna.

Anna Klein, a bonnie lassie from Lewistown, expects to make practical use of domestic science.

Virginia Steller, from Sunbury, vies Kriesler to compete with her.

Harvey Erb, our conscientious student from Millersburg is someday going to be a Theolog at Susquehanna.

Aura Knight, a Danville lass, aspires to be a farmerette.

Charles Hoffman hails from Shamokin. He is a fine lad who expects to add M.D. to his name someday.

Kathryn Decker, Milroy. Snap and pep! Sure, that'll be her middle name. once she is a business woman.

Lloyd Long, Liverpool, has heard the Master's call and is preparing himself for that great work.

Mary Beck, the author of this piece of comment, hails from Sunbury and no one knows where to.

Clarence McGuigan, from Millersburg, burned the midnight oil many a night, just because he loved to study.

Lucy Herr, from McAllisterville, is preparaing for work in the teaching profession.

Walter Bryan is from the land of Liberty. In horsemanship, he cannot be excelled and indeed considering the speed at which he travels, no aspiration is unattainable by him.

"Of all earths joys inviting,
Not one is more delighting,
Than that which lies in singing,
When tender tones are ringing.
All guilt and care most quickly flies
When tones of singing sweetly rise.
And gone is envy, hate and wrong,
And sorrow flies off at the song.
And malice, avarice and greed,
Far from the tones they quickly
speed.
And all is well within the heart.

For sin in singing takes no part.
God's blessing rests upon the tune
And for each mortal 'tis a boon,
Since Satan cannot weave his spell
Where tones of music softly swell.
All people know how David's song
King Saul's existence did prolong;
His harp tones and rich melody
Caused the king's sorrows swift to fly.
And by sweet music men are stirred
To listen to God's Holy Word."

The Christian Associations

FROM our colleges come a great part of the leaders in whose hands will be the task of shaping the destiny of the world. In order that they may fulfill their task justly in the sight of God and man they must have opportunities for elevating high ideals. At Susquehanna these opportunities are offered the students through the Christian Associations, their aim being to lead students to a true knowledge of God through Jesus Christ; to lead them into membership and service in the Christian Church; and to further their growth in Christian character, especially through the study of the Bible, thereby uniting their efforts with all the other Christians to make the will of Christ effective in human society, and to bring the kingdom of God upon the earth.

Our branch of the Y. M. C. A. in the past year has been endeavoring to fulfill this mission. Early in the Fall term a membership campaign was conducted, resulting in a hundred per cent membership. Very able speakers were engaged for the regular weekly meetings. Prayer meetings were held regularly in the different buildings. A splendid Lyceum Course was given during the Winter term. The main attraction being Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis. Two delegates were sent to the Students Volunteer Convention, held at Des Moines, Iowa. The Y. M. C. A. has made wonderful strides forward this year for God's cause and a greater Susquehanna.

The Y. W. C. A. has been very busy also during this year. Much inspiration has been gained from the visits of the field workers. Two delegates were sent to the Eaglesmere Conference, and the Association is planning to send a larger delegation next Spring term. A study class was conducted during the Winter term. Some excellent speakers were with us among whom was Dr. Aberly from our Indian Mission field. The year has been most profitable and gives great promises of the future.

These two great factors at dear old Susquehanna have merged into one this year as never before. They are working side by side, for the one and only great cause "cleaner womanhood and manhood". Truly God has blessed us during the past year, and it is our prayer that His guidance will be with us in our efforts. Many good seeds of good have been sown here, and when we have passed beyond the sheltering walls of our Alma Mater, may we say "We have received some benefits enabling us to press on for higher things."

The Rostrum

ASSOCIATED with every university or college there are many societies or organizations, some of which are of very great importance to each and every student. It does not matter in what department a student may be, he or she cannot get an efficient, well-rounded education without being affiliated with at least the important societies of the institution in which he or she may have matriculated.

These societies and organizations in some respects are very much alike, in others decidedly opposite. There are some, the principal motives are of a moral religious nature, others primarily are social. Still others are of a literary turn the teleology of which is edification.

Of the last stated societies I want to state some facts. The students, today, who have gone out into active service, regardless of what vocation, and have made a creditable success have been very staunch supporters of the literary societies. Not only is this true of Susquehanna alumni, but it is true of other institutions as well. There is a reason for this. Every active and live literary participant receives some training which can be obtained in no other way. For instance, a student who takes part in the debates, from time to time, will get a keen and witty mind which he could not develop in any other way. Again, the training obtained in the appearance before an audience is of inestimable value to any student. However, these are not the only benefits to be derived from a literary society. There are always some social functions, in which there is a splendid opportunity for social culture.

The Junior Oratorical Contest is one of the important events of Susquehanna University. Now, let us look back over a few lists of the participants and there we find that it is a rare thing that a single one took part who was not an enthusiastic member of one or the other of our dear literary societies, the Clionian and the Philosophian Literary Societies. With these few statements of the value of a literary society why do we find some students yet failing to unite with one or the other. It would be for their own advancement, if for no other reason.

We desire this to be an invitation to each student here, and to all new ones who chance to read this, to become members of one or the other of our societies. We extend to each one a glad hand. Come join our ranks.

Athletics

THE Greek loved exercise for its own sake. His philosophy taught synchronous development of mind and body. He admired the physical as well as the spiritual side of life. His gods were muscular gods. He embodied his ideal in his art, an embodiment which has served as an inspiration to every succeeding generation. So, too with the early Romans. Their games were for the masses, but as combat was the chief business of life, the soldier was trained and developed principally in all that pertained to arms. The bearing of tidings, good or evil, was by messenger and in the art of running he excelled. Later with the luxurious decadence of the people—for conquest brought wealth—wealth brought luxury, and luxury, indolence,—the Roman took to his exercise by proxy. Athletics deteriorated to a profession, and its practice became a spectacle in which the Roman participated only by his presence.

Then followed the Dark Ages with its ascetic Christianity, with its exaggerated contempt for all things physical, a reaction of medical mysticism and ecclesiastical superstition against the materialism of the preceding centuries.

Not a little of the latter attitude has continued until within our own time. The monastic scholar was a shriveled and shrunken wight, and the student of succeeding years assiduously followed in his footsteps. He was developed solely in intellectual attributes; his physical health was in inverse ratio to his mental attainments. During the past fifty years however, the folly of this method has been growing apparent, and it is now accepted as an axiom that the best mental growth is compatible only with the most perfect bodily development. Certainly a reciprocal relationship exists between the state of development of the various organs; and it would seem clear that the training which produces the best osseous system, the finest muscles, the best developed viscera, should likewise grow the most perfect nervous system of which the brain is the chief center.

Alma Mater has thus bent her neck to the double task. Ever since she was a child, cradled on the banks of the winding Susquehanna; her faculty and student body have backed up this principle of all around development. Susquehanna's intellectual mill turns out not mental degenerates or physical weaklings, but men "four square," of fittest mind and body, fully equipped to do a man's job in the great struggle for existence. So athletics have found their way into the inner life of our beloved institution.

When those shaggy warriors back in the pioneer days of Missionary Institute battled for the glory of Alma Mater, then a larger college community and a greater Susquehanna was but the high aspirations of her friends, the hope and prayer of every loyal alumnus. Now that her dreams in sense are in this student generation emerging from the trying shadows of the past; we believe that bigger things are in store for her along the line of athletics. Her Board of Directors must, if they do not now fully realize the fact that good athletics is the best possible advertisement a University can hold up to its patrons.

For the past, on diamond or field or track, Susquehanna has nothing to be ashamed or regret. She suffered during the war as did her neighbors.

... In the Spring of 1919, her baseball, we believe was not a failure but a wise and brave attempt. It was hardly fair to expect the almost impossible, with the bulk of her old letter men still under the flag in Europe. Be is sufficient to say; she developed material.

When Fall came and the long gray stream of transports from the harbors of Brest and Saint Nazaire had nearly ceased; athletics were given marked impetus by the support of the returned soldiers. Football was a big improvement over baseball, and the late season may be regarded as largely successful, in view of the fact that Alma Mater labored against adverse circumstances..

Then came the cold blasts of Winter. Fluttering snowflakes transplanted sport to the gymnasium, and basket ball was taken on as the new project. Again Orange and Maroon was seriously handicapped for lack of material and funds. Her season, frail here, and strong there, neither failure or success was short lived.

Reconstruction cannot be accomplished in a day. Athletics at Susquehanna cannot be rebuilt over night. Give her help, give her time, give her whole-hearted loyalty and she will prosper.

Varsity "S" Club

THE Varsity 'S' Club was organized during the year 1916-17. This same year, Edgar R. Wingard took charge of athletics, and teams which reflected much credit to the institution were turned out under his direction. The above named director of athletics at once advanced the idea of forming a Varsity Letter Club. During the Winter Term of 1917, this club came into existence and has been actively engaged in all things pertaining to athletics at Susquehanna since its organization.

The one aim of the club is "better athletics at Susquehanna". Realizing that the red blooded American youth who is contemplating entering college is concerned largely about the caliber of athletics at the institution of his choice, the club is endeavoring to place Susquehanna in the position that she rightly deserves in the athletic world. Better athletics means an increase in enrollment, and more students means a general expansion in all departments of the University.

Only those who have been awarded the Varsity Letter are eligible to membership and this rule is strictly adhered to. However, no one is barred from membership who has been awarded the coveted 'S'.

During the year 1916-19, the organization was in its infancy, yet much was done for the strengthening of the various teams. The following year the college was under the supervision of the Student's Army Training Corps, and as a result the Club was not actively engaged in athletics.

The present year witnessed the return of the Service Men together with a large influx of new students. The Club started operations immediately and have succeeded in establishing several scholarships. Personal appeals for financial assistance were sent to the Alumni, and met with generous responses from many of the old Grads. Home talent plays and Tag Days have also been a source of revenue for this organization.

The Press Club, working under the direction of the Varsity Club, has also been instrumental in having Susquehanna's athletics represented on the sporting pages of the leading newspapers in the East.

This is one of the really live wire organizations at Susquehanna and deserves the hearty support of all who are interested in the institution.

FOOT BALL

Football "S" Men

Sweeley, '21, fullback and captain of the Varsity, is one of the most undaunted and indomitable football warriors. He is one of the best ground gainers on the team, also a most reliable tackler. Sweeley never seeks glory on the gridiron for himself but is always willing to bear the brunt of the fray.

Baker, '22, left tackle and captain elect, promises to develop into one of the best tacklers Susquehanna has ever had. He plays a strong and fearless game, and being physically endowed with a large stature, we expect to see Baker make many deadly tackles behind the opponents line by next season.

Cassler, '20, left end, did very creditable work in that position. His playing is characterized as fast and snappy, and a more dependable player cannot be found. Susquehanna will lose one of her best players in Cassler and it will be difficult to develop another who will play his position as consistently.

Swoope, Sem, '21, fullback, is one of the most aggressive players in the backfield. He is quick in plowing through the line and is certain to carry the "pigskin" for a gain. Blood only seems to spur Swoope on to more heroic efforts, neither will he leave the game for severe bruises. He is one of Susquehanna's greatest athletes.

Steumpfle, '22' halfback, although playing his first season on Susquehanna's team, filled the position very capably. He is a splendid line plunger and tears great gaps in the opponents line. His work on the defensive is also exceptionally good. Steumpfle will be one of the strong men on the team next year.

Dunmire, '21, right end, plays a strong and clean game. In running with the ball he is sure to find the openings in the opponents line and to advance the ball for long gains. He is also especially good in breaking up interference and at the same time getting his man. For another season we expect "Dunnie" to be winning fame on the gridiron for his Alma Mater.

Horton, '20, right guard, is one of the veteran players of the team. He is especially forceful on the defensive and at no time can the opponents gain to great advantage through him. He is a cool and steady player, and his aggressiveness at all times is praiseworthy. We regret that he will not be seen in Susquehanna football togs next season.

Raymer, '22, left guard, always played a steady and consistent game, holding his own on both defensive and offensive. His work at guard was not sensational, but with his motto in a game as "Do or Die" he could be depended upon in any emergency. With his experience, we expect him to play a much stronger game on next season's Varsity.

Zechman, '21, center, played his position in a most creditable manner. He was always accurate and reliable in passing the ball and by quick charging through the opposing defense he successfully blocked many kicks and recovered fumbles. He also broke up effectually many end runs. We hope that "Zech" will again appear on the gridiron next season and play the best game of college career.

Harman, Sem. '21, right tackle, stands over six feet tall, and with these physical resources proved a mighty factor in the building up of a winning combination. At tackle he was never in danger of losing his job, and along with Horton, he made the right side of the line look like a stone wall. He will again be one of our strong men next year.

Rearick, '21, center, although handicapped for part of the season on account of illness, showed excellent form. He is one of Susquehanna's younger proteges, but his most worthy playing points toward large possibilities. He played in two of the biggest games of the season and demonstrated to all, his ability as a warrior of the gridiron.

Gasull, '23, quarterback, is one of the cleverest players on the squad. He is good at dodging and once in an open field, there are few who can stop him. Gasull starred in running back punts, tackling on secondary defense and in making broken field runs.

WHERE

Where can a man buy a cap for his knee,
Or a key for a lock of his hair?
Can his eye be called an academy
Because there are pupils there?
In the crowns of his teeth,
What gems are found—
Who travels the bridge of his nose?
Can he use when shingling the roof of his mouth,
The nail on the ends of his toes?
Can the crook of his elbow be sent to jail,
If so, what did it do?
How does he sharpen his shoulder blades,
I'll be hanged if I know, do you?

Dr. Houtz—"What is density?"
Fisher—"I can't define it but I can give an illustration."
Dr. Houtz—"The illustration is good, sit down!"

He's green the whole year round.

Professor: "It doesn't matter what matter,—any matter."

Sophomore: "You mean what does matter make?"

Professor: "No, I mean what matter makes matter?"

Sophomore: "Well, what matter does it make as to what makes or what matter makes?"

Professor: "It makes no matter."

Sophomore: "Well, what does make matter?"

Professor: (getting madder) "This is entirely a different matter."

Dr. Woodruff—"You probably wouldn't have much difficulty finding your way out."

Dr. Fisher—"If the gentleman in the back row will kindly remove his hat, I will continue to point out a concrete example."

Junior (exultantly)—"I passed Shakespeare today."

Dad—"I hope you sat on him for that."

Mary—"I did."

Horton—"Me, next to a girl."

A LESSON IN ENGLISH

You see a beautiful girl walking down the street.

She is of course, feminine. If she is singular, you are nominative.

You walk across to her changing to verbal, and then become dative.

If she is not objective, you become plural. You walk home together.

Her mother is accusative, and you become imperative. You walk in and sit down. Her little brother is an indefinite article. You talk of the future, she changes to the object.

You kiss her and she becomes masculine. Her father becomes present, things are tense, and you become the past participle.

Shoaf—"How many men are there in the Freshman class?"

Swoope—"About forty."

Shoaf—"Is that all?"

Swoope—"Yes, but the rest will grow up eventually."

Cassler—"Our Prof's sick in bed to-day."

Auman—"Thasso, what's the complaint?"

Cassler—"No complaint; everybody's satisfied."

Dunmire—"When is a davenport not a davenport?"

Streamer—"When its a spoonholder."

Blongh—"I am growing a mustache, you know."

Dagle—"Yes, so someone was telling me."

A farmer to the chem. lab. strayed

Bill—"I'll bet you a kiss I'll steal a kiss from you."

Katie—"I'll bet you two kisses you can't."

Rote—"What would this nation be without women?"

Foulk—"A stagnation."

She stood beneath the mistletoe,
His roommate's pretty sister;
He forward leaned—and stubbed his toe,—
And, holy smoke, he missed her!

Jim—"May I kiss your hand, dear?"

Susan (lifting veil)—"My gloves are on."

Now I lay me down to rest,
To study hard I've tried my best.
If I should die before I wake,
I'd have no blamed exam to take.

Crook (jealously)—"I have seen you running around with a lot of men."

Bunny (tenderly)—"But, dear, I'm on my last lap now."

How sweet is booze!
But, oh how bitter
To love a drink
And not to gitter.

Beth—"I had a date with a baseball pitcher the other night."

Ruth—"How was he?"

Beth—"He was kinda wild."

Father always killed the fatted calf.

Now when the prodigal son comes home from college,

Bish—"There goes a constellation."

Our Advertisers

It will be to the advantage of yourself and the University if you give the advertisers in this book your patronage.

They are the leading firms in their lines, and can and will give you satisfaction.

Most of them have advertised, not from the hope that they will secure an increased trade, but merely because of their interest in Susquehanna and all connected with it.

Let us show them that we appreciate their good will, and, when you call upon them, mention where you saw their advertisement.

Entering the World Electrical

THE graduate of today enters a world electrical.

Gathered from the distant waterfalls or generated by the steam turbine, electric power is transmitted to the busiest city or the smallest country place.

Through the co-ordination of inventive genius with engineering and manufacturing resources, the General Electric Company has fostered and developed to a high state of perfection these and numerous other applications.

And so electricity, scarcely older than the graduate of today, appears in a practical, well developed service on every hand.

Recognize its power, study its applications to your life's work, and utilize it to the utmost for the benefit of all mankind.

Manufacturers of High Grade Over-stuffed Loose Cushion Upholstered Furniture and Day Beds

One year ago we added to our line a new Day Bed which is meeting with wonderful success. The cut shows how beautifully it looks when set up. It will help to eliminate the high cost of living by having one in your home. When folded into a Davenport, it is a handsome piece of furniture. We make a Chair and a Rocker to match this Day Bed. Have your dealer order one for you.

Clulow said—"I would rather be the author of one original thought, than the conqueror of a hundred battles."

Why?

Because the world seems so full of a wonderful Producing Power that is working day and night to fill the needs of the hundreds of millions of people on this earth, it makes us feel, when we look around, that every OPPORTUNITY to create something NEW—that is, add some ONE thing of VALUE to the storehouse of human results—is an impossible task. Yes,—indeed—it seems true, and always will be so to those who are not specially gifted by nature for creative work. The makers of NEW IDEAS are those who use the accomplishments of the past simply as a foundation upon which to stand and look ahead. To them creating a new thing is a joy. It is the way they express Life. It is the law of the Universe working through them. They can't help it. God made them that way.

The world has passed on from the stone age period when man was an animal, lived in a cave, and talked in grunts and growls. Since that time we have been moving right UP to TODAY'S point of development—we call it civilization. The remarkable POINT to which we want to direct your attention is the fact that we have creating at the RIGHT TIME everything needed for the use and benefit of the HUMAN FAMILY.
